Johannes Kepler University, Linz

On this first Tuesday in November America will elect a new President and Vice President. There has been enormous interest in this historic race for the White House.

On this day we're coming together to celebrate with excellent food and a Dixieland band while closely watching the election results via satellite on a wide-screen TV. This group of versatile musicians will have your feet tappin' from their very first song!

An American political expert will be on hand to lead a discussion, answer your questions and explain the system of primaries and today's general election as well as the Democratic and Republican tickets and what the candidates stand for.

Join us for this unprecedented election night! You will be right there and see it via satellite as it unfolds and understand what it means.
